★ Q: Can you help me? I got what looks like a tax bill in the mail. My friend said it was a bill for Residence Tax. What is it and do I have to pay it?

★ A: All residents of Japan, including foreign residents, are required to pay Residence Tax. The municipality in which you were residing in on January 1 2008 is the municipality that will administer your Residence Tax bill. The amount of Residence Tax to be paid, this includes Prefectural Residence Tax and Municipal Residence Tax, is determined by the amount of income received between January and December of the previous year, and the number of dependents you have. If, on January 1 2008, you had lived in Japan continuously for one year or more, or if your occupation requires you to live in Japan for one year or more, then under the eye's of the law, you are a resident and therefore are required to pay Residence Tax this year. If the above applies to you, then June's arrival of the Residence Tax bill in your mail box should not come as a surprise to you. Even if you were living in another city in Japan on January 1st and have recently moved to Nagoya, then your previous municipal office will issue you a bill to your Nagoya address. Alternatively if you were living in Nagoya on January 1st but have recently moved to another city in Japan, then your old Ward Office will issue you a bill to your new address. If you are new to Japan this year, you won't get a bill this time and you can breathe a sigh of relief until next June...

★How and Where do I pay?

Either your employer will deduct tax payments from your salary each month from June to May and then pays the tax to the Ward Office for you. Or you will receive payment slips in the mail directly from your Ward Office. The payment slips are issued in June, August, October and January. If you fail to pay your taxes by the deadline, a delinquency charge will be added. Residence Tax can be paid at a bank, a post office, convenience store, or directly to at the issuing ward office. If you move out of Nagoya or permanently leave Japan, you must pay any remaining balance you have, or appoint a proxy to pay the remaining balance to your former ward office or its branch office.

★Q. How is Resident's Tax calculated?

Residence Tax is calculated in the same way as income tax. Income Tax has 6-tier system (5%, 10%, 20%, 23%, 33%, & 40%) depending on your income and circumstances – all of it going to the central government. Residence Tax has one flat rate of 10%; it goes to your local governments and is divided 60:40 between your city and prefecture. All the key numbers are on your income tax withholding statement which you received from your place of employment in January. An example statement and explanation is on the NIC website.

To put it simply (taxes are never simple),

Residence Tax = Your Total Taxable Income (課税所得 kazei-shotoku) x 10%.

And Your Total Taxable Income is your Total Annual Income minus your Employment Income Deduction (see Note 1) minus your Total fixed-rate exemptions (see Note 2).

Let's look at Jane Smith's example. In Jane's case her net income in 2007 was 5 million Yen. Jane lives in Nagoya's Naka Ward.

★ Note 1: Employment Income Deduction (Table 1)

In Jane's case her net income in 2007 was 5 million Yen.

Therefore her Employment Income Deduction is 5,000,000 x 0.2 + 540,000.

A total of 1,540,000 Yen.

Annual Income (Yen)	Employment Income Deduction
Up to 1,625,000	650,000 Yen
1,625,001 to 1.8 million	Annual Income x 0.4
1,800,001 to 3.6 million	Annual Income x 0.3 + 180,000 Yen
3,600,001 to 6.6 million	Annual Income x 0.2 + 540,000 Yen
6,600,001 to 10 million	Annual Income x 0.1 + 1.2 million Yen
Over 10 million	Annual Income x 0.05 + 1.7 million Yen

★Note 2: Total fixed-rate exemptions

Everyone gets a basic allowance of 330,000 for residence tax. Taxpayers with dependents or individuals with certain circumstances may, in some cases, be eligible for additional tax exemptions.

In Jane's case she gets a 600,000 Yen exemption for her Social Welfare Insurance contributions, a 35,000 exemption for her life insurance payments, a 380,000 exemption for her dependant spouse, a 760,000 exemption for her other dependants, and a basic deduction of 330,000.

In all a deductible total of 2,055,000 Yen.

★Putting it all together

Jane's Total Taxable Income is 5,000,000 Yen minus 1,540,000 Yen minus 2,055,000 Yen = 1,405,000 Yen. So Jane's Residence Tax for 2008 is 1,405,000 Yen x 10% = 140,500 Yen.

★Payment

Jane's Residence Tax is not deducted from her salary by her company and so receives a bill directly from Naka Ward Office. She receives her first bill in June and can either pay the whole year in one lump sum or just pay the first installment of 31,000 Yen. She will receive further bills in August, October and the following January.
