

● Nagoya City Museum: Leonardo da Vinci and The Battle of Anghiari - The Mystery of Tavola Doria -

名古屋市博物館「レオナルド・ダ・ヴィンチと『アンギアーリ』の戦い」展 ～日本初公開『タヴォラ・ドーリア』の謎～

The Battle of Anghiari is an uncompleted mural by Leonardo da Vinci which adorned the Palazzo Vecchio in Florence, Italy. Tavola Doria (The Panel Painting of the Doria Family) is a 16th-century oil painting depicting the central section of the mural. This exhibition examines the mysteries of this lost mural, focusing on the Tavola Doria (presented in Japan for the first time), as well as studies for the mural and derivative works, and looks at the various activities in which da Vinci engaged himself. The rivalry between the two great Renaissance masters is also recreated with studies for Michelangelo's The Battle of Cascina, which occupied part of the same building as Leonardo's lost piece, also being displayed in Japan for the first time. Experience the grand spectacle, etched into art history, of the genius's great mural that had such a profound impact on later generations.

Anonymous artist, after Leonardo da Vinci Tavola Doria (scene of the 'Fight for the Standard' from The Battle of Anghiari)

● Furukawa Art Museum: Celebration of Four Seasons

古川美術館 新春企画展「寿ぎの四季」展

The Furukawa Art Museum presents a journey through the beauty of Japan's four seasons through artworks held in the museum collection. From the joy of spring, as life, released from the cold of winter, resumes; summer, with green returning to the mountainsides, and the rains heralding the heat; the falling leaves of autumn, reminding one of the circular nature of life, and appealing to Japanese sensibilities; to the darkening days of winter, the first snows reinvigorating the mountains and transforming all to pure white.
