■ Living Q & A: I need more time to recover from a workplace injury, but I was told I would be fired
外国人暮らしのQ&A 「仕事でのケガで療養しているが、更に療養が必要と伝えたら解雇すると言われた」

I'm currently recuperating after being injured at work. Initially, I submitted a medical certificate (shindansho / 診断書) for a recuperation period of one week to my employer, but it was not long enough for me to recover, and I was then given a medical certificate for two weeks' recuperation. When I submitted the second medical certificate, I was told that my employment would be terminated because it wasn't clear when I would recover. Can they do that?

When you are injured at work, the expenses incurred in your recuperation (ryōyō / 療養) (or medical treatment [chiryō / 治療]) are provided through workers' compensation insurance (rōsai hoken / 労災保険, or rōdōsha saigai hoshō hoken / 労働者災害補償保険). In addition, if you need to be hospitalized or you are otherwise unable to work as you recuperate or undergo treatment, and are unable to receive wages, you can apply to receive compensation for absence from work (kyūgyō hoshō kyūfu / 休業補償給付) for the period from the 4th day you are unable to work. If you are unable to receive compensation through workers' compensation insurance, despite being injured at work, you will be compensated by your employer (under Chapter VIII of the Labor Standards Act [労働基準法]).

When consulting a medical facility, inform the facility that you were injured at work, and you will be able to receive treatment. (To search for workers' compensation insurance-accredited medical facilities, see the Ministry of Health, Labour and Welfare website at <https://bit.ly/3S7Wp1x>.) Please note that you cannot use social insurance (shakai hoken / 社会保険) (i.e. your employer's health insurance) for work-related injuries.

When you receive medical treatment through workers' compensation insurance, payment is to be requested using a designated form, which you can receive from your nearest Labor Standards Inspection Office, or download from <https://bit.ly/3BrncA3>.

In principle, the medical treatment compensation benefits (ryōyō hoshō kyūfu / 療養補償給付) one receives through workers' compensation insurance continue until the recipient has recovered (chiyu / 治癒). 'Recovered' is also used for cases where further improvement is unlikely, even with continued medical treatment.

Regarding the possibility of termination of employment while an employee is recuperating, Article 19 of the Labor Standards Act states that 'Employers shall not dismiss a Worker during a period of absence for work for medical treatment with respect to injuries suffered in the course of employment, nor within 30 days thereafter,' therefore there seems to be a problem with dismissing a worker at a time when their absence from work is necessary for their recuperation. Please note that this does not apply in cases where absence from work is not necessary for a worker's recuperation, and the standard notification of dismissal may be possible.

If you have a concern or are experiencing an issue with workers' compensation insurance or dismissal, please consult the General Labor Consultation Corner at your nearest Labor Standards Inspection Bureau Office. Also, the Labor Bureau (rōdōkyoku / 労働局) in each prefecture provides a foreign workers' consultation corner, and consultations in foreign languages are available at some locations.

If you do not agree with the result after consulting labor-related government organization, you might also consider consulting a lawyer or other professional with a specialist knowledge of labor issues.

■ What to do when Nankai Trough Earthquake Extra Information is issued - Advance Evacuation Areas
南海トラフ地震臨時情報（巨大地震警戒）発表時に事前避難が必要な地域があります

Following the occurrence of an earthquake of magnitude 8 or higher in the western area of the Nankai Trough, if the possibility of a further Nankai Trough earthquake is assessed as being relatively higher than usual, the Japan Meteorological Agency will issue Nankai Trough Extra Information (Megaquake Alert). Areas expected to be inundated (by tsunami, etc.) after the occurrence of a subsequent earthquake, and where residents will not be able to evacuate before inundation occurs, have been designated Advance Evacuation Areas (jizen hinan taisho chiiki / 事前避難対象地域). When Nankai Trough Extra Information (Megaquake Alert) has been issued, residents in these areas will be requested to evacuate for one week.

Residents in Advance Evacuation Areas should evacuate in advance as directed to protect themselves. Activities within Advance Evacuation Areas will be restricted (businesses will not be able to operate and public facilities will be closed for one week). In areas not designated Advance Evacuation Areas, normal activities will continue as residents reconfirm their earthquake preparedness measures.

Designated Advance Evacuation Areas in Nagoya City

Areas designated Advance Evacuation Areas are those where, due to the subsidence of embankments or levees as a result of seismic motion, inundation (due to tsunami, etc.) is expected to exceed 30cm within 30 minutes of the occurrence of an earthquake*. Parts of 21 school districts situated along waterways in 5 wards are designated Advance Evacuation Areas.

*These estimates are based on a worst-case scenario of a magnitude 9-class earthquake and the resulting liquefaction causing extensive damage to levees.

● Yoshimura Yoshio: Beyond Hyper-realism

吉村芳生展 一超絶技巧を超えてー

Transcendental skill is too simple a phrase to explain the art of Yoshimura Yoshio. From the great number of self-portraits he continued to draw day to day and the newspaper pages he would replicate character by character, to a 10-meter drawing of colored pencils, Yoshimura's hyper-realistic works leave the viewer dumbfounded.

To Countless Glittering Lives (detail), 2011-13, colored pencil on paper

Born in Yamaguchi Prefecture in 1950, Yoshimura suddenly garnered attention in 2007 with the Roppongi Crossing 2007 exhibition (Mori Art Museum) when his much-talked about exhibited works saw him suddenly become the darling of the modern art scene at the age of 57. This retrospective presents an overview of the artist, from his early monotone prints and drawings to the vividly colored floral works of his later years and the self-portraits he drew throughout his life, until his untimely death in 2013.

Witness for yourself the works of Yoshimura Yoshio, not merely well-drawn pictures, but meticulous works that question the meaning of drawing and life itself.

Retro bathhouses in Nagoya 名古屋のレトロな銭湯

Communal bathing can be one of the more challenging Japanese customs to bring yourself to try, particularly for people from cultures where the sole purpose of bathing is to get clean. For many Japanese people, however, the public bath is not only a place to wash, but also to relax, either on your own or with friends or family.

While there are a number of kinds of facilities where the communal bath is the main attraction, such as 'super sentō' (スーパー銭湯, which often also have a restaurant, massage service, a comic and magazine reading room, etc.), smaller local bathhouses, or sentō (銭湯, lit. money + hot water) also provide their own unique style of bathing experience.

More than just a place to wash and soak in hot water, at sentō you can try a number of baths with various remedial properties, such as massaging jet baths, medicated baths and electric current baths. (Watch out for the cold water bath!)

At older sentō you can also enjoy the aesthetic of the bathroom, and details such as the tiles, the form of the baths, and, in some cases, the artistry of a mural. Even the changing rooms (where you remove your clothes before entering the bathroom) have their own distinct atmosphere that can generate feelings of nostalgia in Japanese people accustomed to their own bathtubs and the more modern facilities of the big super sentō.

Here, we have listed some of the older sentō in Nagoya City where you can still experience the old local bathhouse atmosphere. To find other sentō in Nagoya or elsewhere in Aichi, see the AICHI SENTO website at <https://aichi1010.jp/> (Japanese).

For those curious about Nagoya's sentō but still uncomfortable with the idea of communal bathing, the Aichi Public Bathhouse Exhibit (see below) is worth a visit.

Bathhouse tips

- Remove all your clothes and underwear before entering the bathing area.
- Wash your body with a shower or with a pail before entering a bath. Keep the baths clean for other users.
- Leave the washing area clean for the next user.
- Don't put your towel in the bath water.
- Dry yourself as thoroughly as possible before returning to the changing room. Try to keep the changing room dry.
- Don't use smartphones or cameras in the changing room or bathing area.

Aichi Public Bathhouse Exhibit あいち銭湯資料館

Located on the second floor of the Aichi Prefecture Public Bathhouse Operators Association office building is an extremely rare exhibit of sentō-related artifacts. Consisting of equipment and other items donated by former bathhouse operators when their facilities closed, many of the exhibits, from small items such as oke (桶, pail) to larger equipment such as an okama doraiya (オカマドライヤー, hooded hair dryer) and a massage machine, are rarely seen in bathhouses today. Why not soak up some more of the retro bathhouse atmosphere after visiting a bathhouse? You can also pick up some souvenirs, with a selection of original items including bags, T-shirts and badges available at the first floor office.

When: Mon. to Fri. (10:00 - 16:00) Closed Sat., Sun., national holidays, end of year / New Year period, O-bon period in mid-August.

Where: Naka Ward Chiyoda 3-chome (中区千代田3丁目) 9-14 (located within the Aichi Prefecture Public Bathhouse Operators Association [愛知県公衆浴場業生活衛生同業組合] office)

Access: A 3-minute walk from Tsurumai Sta. (「鶴舞」駅, T10) on the Subway Tsurumai Line (地下鉄鶴舞線), and Tsurumai Sta. (「鶴舞」駅, CF02) on the JR Chuo Line (JR中央線).

Nagoya Festival

名古屋まつり

In autumn, various festivals, or matsuri (祭/まつり) are held all over Japan. Here in Nagoya, too, the Nagoya Matsuri (Festival) is scheduled to take place on Sat. 15 and Sun. 16 October for the first time in three years. Beginning in 1955, Nagoya Matsuri is the biggest festival in Nagoya.

The main attraction of this festival is its parades, especially the Procession of the Three Feudal Lords - Oda Nobunaga, Toyotomi Hideyoshi and Tokugawa Ieyasu - accompanied by armored warriors. The "Three Feudal Lords" are played by ordinary citizens. The recruitment procedure is announced in July. Anyone can apply, though horse-riding ability is essential for the role of Nobunaga.

On October 15, the parade departs Nagoya Station and ends at Yaba-cho, but takes a different route on October 16, when it starts at City Hall and travels to Yaba-cho via Sakae.

The parades consist of a variety of processions including Kagura-zoroe (portable shrines), 'flower car' floats, delegations representing Nagoya's sister and friendship cities, and Team Nana-chan (the famous giant white mannequin that stands outside the annex of the Meitetsu Department Store, wearing a special dress prepared by high school students).

The festival will be live streamed this year, so you can enjoy the festival without leaving the house. Enjoy experiencing local culture either in person or at home!

*The Dashi-zoroe procession (featuring traditional floats designated intangible cultural properties of the city) and Kodomo-kai (kids' club) float procession and the youth drum and life brigade during the Procession of the Three Feudal Lords are cancelled this year as part of measures to prevent the spread of COVID-19. Please note that the schedule may be subject to further changes. See the official website for the latest information.
